But lips so blooming must still be fed,
At the close of the year, during which I have enjoyed a large share of the public favor, my most important duty appears to be the providing of full employment during the winter season for such of my men as have at all seasons and under all circumstances been on hand to cashe me to perform my duty to the public. I have, therefore, resolved to reduce my prices, for the present, to the rates advertised; and, if at this end of the next quarter 1 find the balance on the wrong side of the ledger, I shall have the satisfaction of showing that so much has been absorted in the settlement of old accounts.

My role of business has been to give a "quist pro quo," or an equivalent for an equivalent which will be a satisfaction of showing that a "quid," which he can accept if he choose.

Rew York, Jan. 5, 1866.

Dr. Toblas—Dear Sir: Please send me a few more bottles of your Venetian Liniment, and allow me to state at the sace time that whenever I have used it for rheum and pains, toothache, &c., it has been alkended with immediate relief. Several of my friends also use your liniment, and bear iestimony to its high value. I am, dear sir, yours, very respectfully.
